Fancy sharing a jackpot?

Everyone's a winner as Hull New Theatre cashes in on The Syndicate next summer.

Based on Kay Mellor's hit BBC TV show, this new stage play follows five supermarket employees whose lottery syndicate numbers come in, just as their jobs and livelihoods are under threat.

Will a share of the £18million jackpot make their dreams come true or nightmares a reality? One thing's for certain, the win of a lifetime will change the lives, loves and relationships of all the syndicate members... for ever.

This moving comedy drama runs from 25 – 29 June and is written by Kay Mellor and directed by daughter Gaynor Faye. The production is based on the first series of The Syndicate and marks the world premiere of Kay Mellor's final stage play, following on from the huge success of her other stage adaptations; Band of Gold and Fat Friends.

The mother/daughter duo have collaborated on multiple writing and directing projects, with The Syndicate marking the directorial debut for Gaynor and honouring the extraordinary talents of her mother.

Watched by millions, the BBC show ran for four series demonstrating Kay's unparalleled ability to make audiences laugh and cry and above all entertain, with her wonderful characters and stories.

Don't miss the chance to see this jackpot of a production when it hits the stage.
